He said to his friend : "If the British march Hang a lantern aloft in the bally arch
Of the North Church tower, as a signal lightOne, if by land, and two, if by sea;
And I on the opposite shore will be And I cm the opposite shore will be Ready to ride and spread the alarm Through every Middleex village and farm For the country-folk to be up and arm."

Then he said: "Good-night!" and with muffled Silently rowed to the Charlestown shore, Just as the moon rose over the bay, Where, swinging wide at her moorings, lay The Somerset, British man-of-war; A plantom ship, with each mast and spar Across the moon like a prison bar, And a huge black hulk, that was magnified By its own reflection in the tide.

Meanwhile, his friend, through alley and street, Wanders and watches with eager care, Till in the silence around he hears. The muster of men at the barrack door, The scund of arms, and the tramp of feet, And the measured tread of the grenadiers, Marching down to their boat on the shere.

Then he climbed the tower of the Old North Church Then he climbed the tower of the Old Nort By the wooden stairs, with stealthy tread, To the beifry chamber overhead, And started the pigesons from their perch, On the sombre rafters, that round him mas Masses and moving shapes of shade— By the trembling ladder steep and tall; Masses and moving shapes of shade—
By the trembling ladder steep and tall,
To the highest window in the wall.
Where he paused to listen and look down .
A manuent on the roofs of the town,
And the moonlight flowing over all.
Beenath, in the church-yard, lay the dead,
In their night encampment on the hill.
Wrapped in ailmore so deep and still
That he could hear, like the sentinel's tread,
The watchful night-wind, as it went
Creeping along from tent to tent,
And seeming to whisper "All is well!"
A moment only he feels the spell
Of the place and the hour, and the secret dread
Of the lonely beirry and the dead;
For suddenly all his thoughts are bent
On a shadowy something far away,
Where the river widen to meet the bay—
A line of black that bends and flows
On the rising tide, like a bridge of boats.

Meanwhile, impatient to mount and ride, Booted and sourred, with a heavy stride On the opposite shore walked Paul Bevere. Now he patted his horse's side, Now he patted his horse's side, Now he gazed at the landscape far and near, Then, impetnous, etamped the carth, And turned and tightened his horse's girth; But mostly he watched with caper search. The beffry-tower of the Old North Church, As it rose above the graves on the hill, Lonely, and spectral, and sembre, and still, And lot as he looks, on the beffry's height A glimmer, and then a gleam of light! He springs to the saddle, the bridle he turns, But imgors and gazes, till full on his sight A second lamp in the befry burns.

A hurry of hoofs in a village street, A shape in the moonlight, a bulk in the dark, And beneath, from the pebbles, in passing, Struck out by a steed flying feariess and fleet; That was all! And yet, through the gloom and light, fate of a nation was riding that night. I the spark struck out by that steed in its flight died the land into fixme with its heat.

He has left the village and mounted the steep, And beneath him, tranquil and broad and deep Is the Mystic, meeting the occan tides; And under the aiders that skirt its edge, Now seft on the sand, now loud on the ledge, Is heard the tramp of his steed as he rides.

It was twelve by the village clock When he crossed the bridge into Medford town; He heard the crowing of the cook And the barking of the farmer's dog, And felt the damp of the river fog That rises after the sun goes down.

It was one by the village clock
When he galloped into Lexington.
He saw the gilded weathercock
Swim in the moonlight as he passed,
And the meeting-house windows, blank and bare,
Gaze at him with spectral glare,
As if they already stood aghast
At the bloody work they would look upon.

It was two by the village clock
When he came to the bridge at Concord town;
He heard the bleating of the fock,
And the witter of hirds among the trees,
And felt the breath of the morning breeze And one was safe and asteep in his bed Who at the bridge would be first to fail-Who that day would be lying dead, Pierced by a British musket-ball.

You know the rest. In the books you have read How the British regulars fired and fied. How the farmers gave them ball for ball From behind each fence and farm-pard wall, Chasing the red-coats down the lane, Then crossing the fields to emerge again Under the trees at the turn of the road, And only pausing to fire and load.

Bo through the night rode Paul Revere;
And so through the night went his cry of alarm
To every Middlesex village and farm—
A cry of defiance, and not of feat,
A voice in the darkness, a knock at the door,
And a word that shall eche forevermore!
For, borne on the night-wind of the Past,
Through all our history, to the last,
In the hour of darkness and peril and need,
The people will waken and listen to hear
The hurrying hoof-beats of that steed,
And the midnight message of Paul Revere,

The discoverer of this great medicina stimulant is surely entitled to the thanks of a whole nation, and it is not extravagant to entitle him "a second Father Matthew." 33

Dr. Pierce's Favorito Prescription is very strongly recommended by the Medical Faculty and is largely prescribed among their Fe-male Patients. It is worthy of all confidence, as may be seen from the following testimonials: Dr. G. B. Chapman, Plattsmouth, Neb., writes: I have under treatment a lady, who, for the past seven years has been afflicted, and, after trying several physicians without receiving benefit, is gaining rapidly on your Facorite Prescription.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Dn. R. V. Pirmer, Baffalo, N. X.: Deer Sir—I have not a word to express my gratitude to you for your advice and assistance in my case. There is not one who has used your medicines since they have been been greatly benefited. Since I have been so helped by its use, six or seven around me left off all doctors and other medicines, and now use it in their families, after being cured of the same disease as mine. You do not know what a wonder it created in our city, by its restoring my sister I wrote you about, for she had been under the care of three of our best doctors, but could not sit up but for a few minutes at one time. I care of three of our best doctors, but count not sit up but for a few minutes at one time. I begged of her to try your medicines, and before she had used haif the bottles she could go all around the yard; and has now just come home from a visit five miles away.

MRS. THOS. MCFARLAND.

DISEASED LUNGS ARE GREATLY ON THE INCREASE IN THIS COUNTRY.—The sudden chang-ing of weather has done much to give rise to Consumption. But thousands bring it on by Consumption. But thousands bring it on by their own imprudence, such as wearing damp clothing and going from the warm room into the cold air and checking the perspiration, which causes irritation of the Lungs, and then matter or phlegm will collect, which nature will try to remove by coughing. If nature does not raise the matter with ease, and stop this inflammation, tubercles will soon form and consumption will soon follow. Allen's Lung Balsam will cure consumption, if it is only taken in time. For sale by all Medicine Dealers.
